PROGRAMME OVERVIEW

Kim Robinson and Toby Hall are the coordinators and course developers. They have almost 50 years combined clinical experience and have taught manual therapy at an advanced post graduate university level as well as to physiotherapists around the world for over 15 years each. Toby and Kim are the educators for the program and guide participants through the comprehensive syllabus.

The course will cover the anatomical and functional basis to the evaluation of pain disorders of the spine. Of special interest will be clinical practice, emphasizing clinical examination, evaluation, interpretation, differential diagnosis and therefore classification and treatment. Classification of spinal pain disorders and subsequent sub-category based treatment strategies is the way forward in manual therapy, and there is increasing evidence to support this.

This course will be conducted in lecture, tutorial and workshop format for the clinician or academic who is interested in manual therapy, manual medicine or musculoskeletal medicine. It is anticipated that the course content will be suitable to individuals who are seeking new knowledge, to individuals seeking to expand their knowledge and to those individuals seeking the stimulation of clinical interaction. Whilst the course will be presented at a high level this should not be seen as a barrier to participation for those with little or with no previous experience in this special area. As a result of attending the course it is anticipated that participants will gain personal satisfaction as in a variety of ways that will enhance their individual requirements.
